725/37+ would be an improper classification for this case. Whereas we recognize that video is being displayed, there are no claims indicating that there is any video distribution where the transmission path is dedicated to video transmissions. Consequently, the case is not even a class 725 case.

Note (1)

Further, the case has been docketed 01 November 2003 to Igor Borissov.

This class includes subject matter directed to the transmission of video data. Systems which are concerned with the transmission of nonvideo data, such as systems which provide audio data or data in the generic sense, are classified elsewhere.
